Havana, Jun 26 (Prensa Latina) The Cubanacan hotel group reaffirmed on Friday that the staggered reopening of its tourist services in Cuba is subject to strict sanitary protocols, endorsed by the Ministry of Public Health.

On a press briefing, the entity assured that it is in a position to guarantee the safety of its clients, as tourism activity in the country resumes during the first post-Covid-19 pandemic phase, focused on the national market.

In that regard, the president of Cubanacan, Yamily Aldama, indicated that during the pandemic the entity prepared for the different phases of reopening the sector, one of the hardest hit by the novel coronavirus worldwide.

'We have been working along with the health authorities and the hotel chains that accompany the group, in order to offer a better service to customers who once again return to each of our facilities,' she said.

Adalma referred that the open facilities in much of the national territory have strict sanitary protocols and better quality standards, in order to offer a better experience to customers.
