The 39-year-old Iglesias will open the Mexican leg of his tour on May 6 in Veracruz, playing songs like "Bailando" from his latest album.

The tour will continue with performances in Tuxtla Gutierrez on May 7; Torreon on May 21; San Luis Potosi on May 22; Morelia on May 23; Queretaro on May 28; and Tijuana two days later.

The "Sex and Love Tour," launched last year, has already taken Iglesias to the United States, Canada, Argentina, Spain, Britain, France, The Netherlands, Finland, Ireland and Russia.

Before arriving in Mexico, Iglesias will have performances in Guatemala, Paraguay and Nicaragua.

"The concert will be loaded with sensuality, good music and First World technology, and Iglesias's fans will have the chance to enjoy his all-time musical hits," the concert promoters said in a statement.

Iglesias, winner of the Grammy Award for Best Latin Artist, has won two Latin Grammys, two Billboard Awards, 27 Billboard Latinos and 10 World Music awards, among other honors.

Iglesias has sold more than 60 million records, singing both in Spanish and English, and is considered one of the most successful Latino artists in the world, with hit songs such as "Hero," "Tonight I'm Lovin' You," "Bailamos," "Cuando Me Enamoro" and "Experiencia Religiosa."
