The exchange between Cuba and Argentina in the commercial and economic area is today the meeting point of a workshop organized here by Small and Medium companies Chamber, which is attended by several companies from both nations.

Based at the Hotel Dolmen, the event - which will be held for two days - serves as a platform to strengthen ties in this sector and opens a door in search of opportunities in various portfolios.

We have come a long way and we bet heavily on that relationship between small and medium-sized Argentine and Cuban companies, said Orestes Pérez, the ambassador of the Caribbean nation, in the inauguration of the meeting.

Juan Salvador Amato, a representative of the Chamber, told Prensa Latina that there are several business persons in the country who are already trading with Cuba and others are visiting the island to analyze future trade relations.

Representing the Caribbean nation, a delegation of companies such as Biocubafarma, Tecnosuma and Heber Biotec attend the event Cuba in Argentina.
