
Trump: Sharp Thorns on the Way to Abyss

06/07/2017

Another devastating news article on the health care reform championed by the current U.S. President was released on Monday in Miami.

El Nuevo Herald published it under the authorship of Fabiola Santiago, columnist of the newspaper.

She began her article: in a weird moment where Trump said the truth, he labeled as “despicable” its approval by the House of Representatives.

She added, after having studied for months this “untrustworthy and conceited President.”

When he gained conscious, based on experts, of how his health project would affect 23 million people, he tried to hurry ahead of things.

On one side, Santiago wrote, this “Twitter in Chief” urged the Senate to get closer and improve the Obamacare.

However, it has not happened. In fact, the Senatorial laws are bad jokes for Americans.

Any motive? He promised better and cheaper health care and not making another round of cuts to the Medicare.

As we know, Medicare is a program aimed at softening tragedies that cause damage to the poorest people in society.

But nothing new has come up. And yet, Trump is still requesting the Senate a swift adoption.

Observers believe the so-called Trumpcare has never been so close, but they warn it is not what he promised.

Fabiola Santiago recalls that Florida is the state in the U.S. with higher number of Obamacare's subscribers (1,300 000).

While explaining her "despite everything", she points out some of the setbacks suffered by the Obamacare in this Southern state.

For instance, having a Governor and a Legislative where Republicans prevail.

Around three million people could be affected if the plot fabricated by the Senate succeeds.

A new and uncomfortable setback for a head of state already spotted with strong thorns paving his way to abyss.
