
Michelle Bachelet: Naïve or Ignorant?

13/05/2019

Michelle Bachelet, United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, made a huge mistake last Thursday.

She took the side of those who attempted a coup d'État last April 30 against the legitimate government of Venezuela.

In this regard, Jorge Arreaza, Venezuela's FM stated:

"It is a nonsense that the Office of the High Commissioner has failed to condemn the coup d'État attempt on April 30 and she is now supporting the members of the coup d'État who must face justice."

And he added: "Is it that coup d'États are organized to defend Human Rights?"

Bachelet also condemned the arrest of Edgar Zambrano, vice-president of the National Assembly, who was involved in the coup.

In a short visit to Caracas, she was questioned after failing to take a position on the subject.

Afterwards, the statement of the first vice-president of PSUV (United Socialist Party of Venezuela) was released and there, he warned about future arrests on people linked to the conspiracy led by the US along with the far right of Venezuela origin.

This new chapter cannot be rightfully understood if we do not delve deep into the causes that have triggered it.

We are witnessing a conspiracy drew up in Washington to undermine the Bolivarian Revolution.

This conspiracy is also co-starred by puppet governments such as Argentina's, Brazil's, Colombia's, Ecuador's, and Chile's.

All of them are angry in their respective role as the errant boys of a government that loves treason but hates traitors."

According to actual facts, they have an ally in the UN, the High Commissioner for Human Rights.
