
'Star Wars' 'Biggest' Leak Spotted Online, Removed Over Copyright Complaints

25/10/2019

Earlier this week, a trailer for “The Rise of Skywalker,” the final film of the Star Wars sequel trilogy, aired during “Monday Night Football” on ESPN. The movie is due to come out on 20 December.

Two leaked images, including the one that looked like Palpatine’s face from Star Wars: The Rise of Skywalker, has emerged on Reddit before being removed over copyright complaints.

The images were shared on the popular Youtube fan account “World of Geekdom”, with its video then facing a copyright takedown by Disney, something that prompted many fans to believe that the leaked images “were, in fact, real”, The Esquire website reported, referring to the images as the “biggest Star War leaks”.
