
Geneva: Cuban Doctor infected with Ebola evolves favorably

25/11/2014

Cuban doctor Felix Baez Sarria, who contracted Ebola in Sierra Leone, evolves favorably and the virus presence in his blood has decreased considerably, confirmed the Geneva University Hospital's medical staff in charge of his care.

"His medical condition has improved notably. He has no fever and has started eating", said the chief medical officer of Intensive Care Unit, Jerome Pugin, responsible for the health of the Cuban professional.
