World Health Organization (WHO) Director General Margaret Chang held a conversation with the Cuban delegation to the 136 period of sessions of the Executive Council of the international organization, about aspects of mutual interests.

During the working meeting, they talked about the most important issues to be dealt with during this session of the WHO Executive Council, of which the island is a member, as well as the Ebola epidemics, said a press release circulated today by the Cuban embassy in Geneva.

Besides, they discussed the prospects to continue tightening and diversifying cooperation relations between Cuba and the WHO.
