
Argentine President Signals Links Between Nisman, Vulture Funds

21/04/2015

On her social media accounts, Argentine President Cristina Fernandez pointed to a report that suggest a link between the late prosecutor Alberto Nisman and Paul Singer, head of one of the hedge funds seeking billions from Argentina's government.

"We are facing a global modus operandi, which not only harms National Sovereignty but also generates international political operations of any kind," Fernandez said.

Fernandez, who is in Russia for bilateral meetings, based her posting on a column published Saturday by Jorge Elbaum, former executive director of the Delegation of Argentine Jewish Associations (DAIA).

According to the article, Nisman said he would ask for financial aid from people working for hedge funds in order to stop the signing of the Memorandum of Agreement between Argentina and Iran to cooperate in the investigation on the bombing at the Argentine Israelite Mutual Association (AMIA) in 1994.

According to the document published by Elbaum, the former DAIA employee alleges that Nisman said in a meeting that "If necessary, Paul Singer will help us."

The text also refers to U.S.-based non-governmental organizations "that act as lobby groups and that are funded by the vulture funds."

The Argentine government has been fighting a U.S. court decision ordering payment to the vulture fund creditors, who have refused to agree to the terms of Argentina's debt renegotiation with 93 percent of its creditors.

The alleged link is based on an opinion article by former executive director of the Delegation of Argentine Jewish Associations (DAIA). On her social media accounts, Argentine President Cristina Fernandez pointed to a report that suggest a link between the late prosecutor Alberto Nisman and Paul Singer, head of one of the hedge funds seeking billions from Argentina's government. "We are facing a global modus operandi, which not only harms National Sovereignty but also generates international political operations of any kind," Fernandez said. Fernandez, who is in Russia for bilateral meetings, based her posting on a column published Saturday by Jorge Elbaum, former executive director of the Delegation of Argentine Jewish Associations (DAIA). According to the article, Nisman said he would ask for financial aid from people working for hedge funds in order to stop the signing of the Memorandum of Agreement between Argentina and Iran to cooperate in the investigation on the bombing at the Argentine Israelite Mutual Association (AMIA) in 1994. According to the document published by Elbaum, the former DAIA employee alleges that Nisman said in a meeting that "If necessary, Paul Singer will help us." The text also refers to U.S.-based non-governmental organizations "that act as lobby groups and that are funded by the vulture funds." The Argentine government has been fighting a U.S. court decision ordering payment to the vulture fund creditors, who have refused to agree to the terms of Argentina's debt renegotiation with 93 percent of its creditors.

This content was originally published by teleSUR at the following address:

<http://www.telesurtv.net/english/news/Argentine-President-Signals-Links-Between-Nisman-Vulture-Funds-20150421-0008.html>. If you intend to use it, please cite the source and provide a link to the original article.
www.telesurtv.net/english
