
Descemer Bueno Composes Music for Documentary on Art Schools

27/04/2015

The Vistar magazine reported the current draft of Bueno, winner of three Grammy Awards last year for the aforementioned song also featuring Spanish Enrique Iglesias and Cuban duo 'Gente de Zona'.

The artist entered the recording studio Abdala to create the music for a documentary considered very important to him, because it takes him back to his student days, and that seduces him.

"I'm doing it in such a way so that it can be music that people can enjoy, music for all kinds of people", explained the musician, who had participated in pop-fussion projects such as 'Yerbawena', among others.

He explained that this documentary sums up 11 life stories of several students and teachers of different art forms, including some teachers who were his classmates.

For this soundtrack, he is accompanied by pianist Jorge Aragon, percussionist Yaroldy Abreu, Gaston Joya on the double bass and Maykel Barzagas as the producer.
