Specialists of the Museum of New York interested in increasing ties with its similar in Cuba

20/07/2015

Porzecanski said her institution would like to keep on developing what it has been a long history of collaboration with the Cuba's National Museum of Natural History of Cuba in the future.

The American specialist recently took part in a symposium of institutions of this category, carried out during the 10th International Convention of Environment and Development held in Havana.

She also said Cuba's National Museum of Natural History with excellent experts in its staff has played a key role all along these years, since it was founded.
