

Keith Richards Doesn't Think Sgt. Pepper's Was Very Good at All, No Sir!

07/08/2015

Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band may be a record you've personally listened to and enjoyed, but Keith Richards would like you to know it's something he didn't like one bit, nuh-uh, recently telling *Esquire* he thought the album was "a mishmash of rubbish."

"The Beatles sounded great when they were the Beatles," the Rolling Stones guitarist said in an interview with the magazine published Wednesday:

But there's not a lot of roots in that music. I think they got carried away. Why not? If you're the Beatles in the '60s, you just get carried away—you forget what it is you wanted to do. You're starting to do Sgt. Pepper. Some people think it's a genius album, but I think it's a mishmash of rubbish, kind of like Satanic Majesties—"Oh, if you can make a load of shit, so can we."

Wow, "a load of shit." It sure sounds like Richards has strong musical preferences, ones that may differ your own.

Perhaps even by quite a lot!
