Tejeira began writing the script in 2006 and said: 'I know how complex the way is, but is one of those things that may happen. We are in competition'.

The film is about three lonely characters that in the New Year's Eve come to a small town in the Uruguayan countryside, where they have an opportunity to twist their destiny, informed the producers.

The film won last year the award for best feature film at the 10th edition of the Zurich Film Festival.
