Maria Zajarova, spokesperson for the Russian Foreign Ministry stressed on Wednesday that these reports do not reflect the reality.

The spokesperson explained that during the preparations for the Vienna meeting Russia emphasized the need to have a consensus on parties which are considered "terrorists" in Syria, and to reach an agreement regarding the list of Syrian opposition to negotiate with the Damascus government.

Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said on Tuesday that it was expected that the Vienna meeting would reach a final agreement on the list of terrorist organizations.
