
Survey Shows Nearly 80% Venezuelans Support Socialist Economic Model

26/01/2016

Rangel refers to a survey conducted by Hinterlaces, which revealed that only 19% of those asked disagree with the new production model being proposed by President Nicolás Maduro to confront and overcome the country's economic crisis that resulted from plummeting oil prices on the world market and the destabilization campaign unleashed by the Venezuelan right.

Ninety percent of those surveyed favor an alliance between the Venezuelan government and private entrepreneurs to diversify the economy and substitute imports.

The study also revealed that 56 percent of Venezuelans think the State and not the private sector should run the country's economy.
