National Ballet of Cuba Returns to its Headquarters

12/04/2016

From next April 22 to 29, fans of this genre can enjoy the much desired return, which includes four young dancers who make their debut in this new face of the company.

One of them is Patricio Revé, who in his short career has already been honored with important accomplishments in the International Academies Encounter for the teaching of ballet in Cuba, and this time he plays the role of Prince Siegfried.

There is also the multi-awarded Rafael Quenedit, who has won prizes like the Gold Medal of the International Ballet Competition in South Africa and the highest award for Masters Technique in the Academies International Contest for Teaching Ballet.

This cast is completed by already recognized figures in the Cuban dancing stage as the prima ballerinas Viengsay Valdes, Estheysis Menendez, Grettel Morejon, Sadaise Arencibia and Anette Delgado, along with leading dancer Dani Hernández, all accompanied by soloists and corps de ballet of the company.

Tickets for the expected revival will be on sale from April 19 in the usual schedules at the box office of the Alicia Alonso Havana Grand Theatre, located in 458th of Prado St., between San Jose and San Rafael, in Old Havana.
